Dear Friends,

This week, I began a series of breakfast meetings with the city's employees. I want to find out how they think we're doing as a city. More importantly, I want to hear their ideas for improving how we do things and I want them to know how much I appreciate their efforts.

Before the end of the first meeting my initial instincts were confirmed: Clarksville has incredibly talented and dedicated folks at every level. I know there is much work to be done but I also know we have people in place who are up to the tasks ahead. I'm very grateful to be working side-by-side with people who want to make the city a better place to live, work and raise our families and who give their best to all of us who call Clarksville home.

This Thanksgiving, as we take time to pause and reflect, I am especially thankful to all of our employees and citizens who make Clarksville great. Thank you for your service, ideas, energy and commitment. Working together, we continue to move Clarksville forward.

Happy Thanksgiving from my family to yours.

Sincerely,

Kim McMillan
City Mayor
